Identity Theft

Prevent identity theft online

Identity theft occurs when someone takes information about you and pretends to be you for fraudulent purposes. If you are a victim, the consequences are serious - you can be denied a driver's licence, a student loan, cell phone service. It can take years to undo the damage.

Every year, thousands of people are victims of identity theft. Increasingly, young people are becoming prime targets because it's easy for identity thieves to find and steal their information.

Providing our personal information online makes our lives easier, but it also makes it easier for identity thieves to scoop that information and use it for criminal purposes. Keep the following in mind when online:

- Be defensive with personal information. Give out as little information about you as possible and only when you initiated the contact. If you are being asked for your birthdate, real email address, or other details - ask why. Don't provide it if you don't have to. If you are on a site that requests personal or financial information, make sure it's secure by looking for 'https' in the address bar ('s' stands for secure) and a padlock icon. Don't ever send your information in an email.

- Create strong passwords and keep them secret. Your first line of defence in the virtual world begins with your password or your personal identification number (PIN). Don't use your girl/boyfriend's name, your pet's name, or your phone number. Passwords should have at least eight characters; include a combination of letters, numbers and symbols like #, $, %, !, and be easy for you to remember but difficult for others to guess.

- Improve your computer's security. Greatly reduce your risk from hackers, viruses and worms by using a firewall, installing antivirus and antispyware software and updating it routinely, and keeping your operating system software up to date.

- Be ultra-careful with your Social Insurance Number (SIN). It's an important key to your identity, especially in credit reports and computer databases. Know how your personal information will be used. Ask if you don't.
